

VDD IQware signs reseller agreement with DocScan

Waalre/Heino, 27 November 2007 – VDD IQware, supplier of the Hyarchis.Net enterprise content management solution, and DocScan have signed a reseller agreement at the VDD IQware client event. DocScan will offer Hyarchis.Net to the SME sector as SaaS (Software as a Service) from the spring of 2008.

The new reseller agreement makes digitizing of document flows available to businesses in the small and medium-sized enterprise (SME) sector. By offering Hyarchis.Net on a subscription basis, companies with a limited IT budget can now store their structured and unstructured documents centrally. As well as handling the sales, provision of advice and implementation of the solution, DocScan will also offer additional document-related services. When the usual staff are absent, DocScan can scan incoming mail and place it in Hyarchis.Net. Users can access their own from anywhere at any time via the Internet. DocScan also offers data entry solutions that automate the processing of forms within organizations, such as time sheets, delivery notes and questionnaires, and process them digitally them using data capture systems.

“My years of experience as an ICT consultant and project manager in document processing have made it clear to me that there’s a real need for businesses in SME sector for solutions to digitize paper flows,” says Ben Meijer, Managing Director of DocScan. “With Hyarchis.Net as an SaaS solution, I can address that need. VDD IQware is a reliable partner who has demonstrated their success in this market for a number of years, so they are the right partner for me.”

“We are delighted to have signed this reseller agreement,” says VDD IQware Account Manager Mark Schoorl. “DocScan is a new company that sees significant opportunities for document management in the SME sector. Outsourcing the distribution of Hyarchis.Net as SaaS to DocScan enables us to fully focus on the development of the software, while sales to the specialized SME market will be in good hands at DocScan.”
